THE FILM: Six months after Hurricane Katrina devastates New Orleans, St. Augustine church parishioners learn their church is to be closed and their priest, Father Jerome LeDoux, sent away. Parishioners of the historic church – where slaves, free blacks and whites first worshipped together and where many say jazz was born – join forces with local musicians to resist. The film is a contemporary retelling of the Easter story, in a city where politics, culture and religion collide and where God’s plan remains impenetrable.
